

Erwin Mohr, Tinley Park Killed In Train-Auto Crossing Crash

Ervin Mohr, 29 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Mohr of Tinley Park, was instantly killed when the auto he was driving was struck by a fast Grand Trunk passenger train in Harvey last Saturday morning.

Mr. Mohr had been employed at the Ingalls and Shepherd Co., plant in Harvey. He was laid off Saturday morning. Together with a friend of his, they gathered their work clothes and Mr. Mohr asked his friend to ride with him, offering to take the latter to his home a few blocks from the plant. About 80 feet away is the Grand Trunk crossing. No gates or warning bell protect this crossing, although a flasher is located there.

Just as Mr. Mohr's car reached the center of the crossing the flyer roared into view at a 75 mile an hour clip and struck the car squarely in the middle. The wreckage of the car with the bodies of the two men wedged in it, was carried for several blocks before the engineer could stop his train. It was reported that the same train had struck an auto at a crossing in Indiana only a short time before. The engineer has been in charge of this train for about 18 months.

Both Mr. Mohr and his friend were dead when their bodies were removed from the wreckage.

Erwin Mohr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mohr was born in Tinley Park April 10, 1908. On May 3, 1908 he was baptized in the Zion Lutheran church in Tinley Park and on March 20, 1921 he was confirmed in the same church.

On February 11, 1930 he was united in marriage with Miss Mable Heckler of Blue Island.

Surviving are the widow, one son William, and daughter Dolores; the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mohr all of Tinley Park and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the late home to the Zion Lutheran church with Rev. Albert Buddenhagen officiating. The edifice was thronged beyond capacity by the hundreds of friends and neighbors who came to pay their final tribute of respect. Burial was made in the Lutheran cemetery at Tinley Park.

Previous to entering the employ of Ingalls & Shepherd, Mr. Mohr had been in the employ of the E. J. & E. railroad.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the family bereft of their loved one by this terrible tragedy.

M. of which he was master in 1910; of Joliet Chapter Royal Arch Masons; Joliet Council, Royal and Select Masons, Joliet Commandery Knights Templar; Oriental Consistory, Ansar Temple (Shrine); and the Shrine Club of Joliet. All of this equipment was purchased from O. A. Rusch of Tiedtville, Manager and distributor of Northern Illinois for the manufacturers of the fire extinguishers. SNOW STORM TIES UP ROADS; TREES DAMAGED

A record breaking snow and sleet storm tied up all traffic in the Chicago area Wednesday. The storm set in early Tuesday evening and by Wednesday morning, a heavy sleet fell coating all budding and flowering trees and shrubs with a heavy sheath of ice.

The Lincoln Highway was not as badly affected by the snow and sleet as are the north and south paved roads. Wolf Road was impassable until the snow plows cleared a lane Wednesday night and Thursday morning. Snow plows were stalled for a while north of Mokena on Wolf road.

At Tinley Park, Harlem and Oak Park avenues were badly drifted and Wednesday morning, fully 30 cars and trucks were stalled. A snow plow operated by George Price of Tinley Park, was ditched and another plow also was stalled, but it finally got thru. Side roads are still impassable in many instances. Traffic on 159th street also was difficult as also was the case on 183rd street.

A middle aged man and wife who were traveling from Florida to Wisconsin, were stranded at Tinley Park late Wednesday afternoon when their car became stalled in a deep snow drift on Harlem avenue. The car was towed to the Tinley Park garage while the couple secured rooms in town for the night. They ran into the storm 50 miles south of here.

The Rock Island railroad was extra well patronized during the storm period by passengers who otherwise usually drive their cars to work. Suburban train service was not much delayed by the storm.

The electric line serving Mokena was put out of commission early Wednesday evening when tree limbs broken by the ice fell on the wires. It was nearly two hours before electric service could be restored. In the meantime candles and kerosene lamps were pressed into use.

Broken electric line wires near the Fred Yunker farm south of Mokena, furnished a brilliant fire works display late Wednesday night. The Public Service Company was notified and soon had linemen on the job to repair the break.

It is feared that this sudden cold snap has ruined the fruit crop in this section, as many trees had started to bud during the recent balmy weather. Farmers in this section have been sowing oats the past week but it is thought the present snow fall will be a benefit instead of a detriment to the oat crop.

Martin R. O'Brien Seeks Re-Election

Martin Raymond O'Brien, Democratic Party leader of the 11th district is seeking re-election to the office of State Central Committeeman to which office he was elected two years ago.

Mr. O'Brien, whose home is in Aurora took the place on the State Committee made vacant through the retirement of former Lieutenant Governor, Thomas Donovan, of Joliet. O'Brien is seeking re-election on the basis of his loyal support to Governor Hornor and down-state Democracy. He is the Treasurer of the down-state Democratic State Central Committee, which group includes 14 of the 15 State Central Committeemen, outside of Cook County. He has the endorsement of the County Central Committees of all four counties, which, of course, include Will.

His popularity with the precinct committeemen is in a measure due to the fact that he has wholeheartedly co-operated with them, and has not meddled in matters of county patronage. County Chairman Connors, of Will County, asserts that O'Brien has never failed to give his endorsement to any man recommended to him by the Will County Committee.

O'Brien has an enviable record in public office. As each of the five times that he has sought public or party office he has been elected by increasing majorities. In 1932, he was high man in the 11th District for the position of Alternate Delegate to the Chicago Democratic National Convention, has three times been elected to the Kane County Board of Supervisors, and in 1936, defeated his present opponent for the office of State Central Committeeman.

According to advice from Washington, O'Brien will doubtless be granted permission to erect and operate a radio broadcasting station at Aurora, which when completed, will prove a tremendous asset to Illinois Democracy. His name appears first on the ballot for this office, and local party leaders are actively supporting.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, April 2, 1938, in the Green Garden Methodist church at 8:00 o'clock by Rev. C. F. As the dawn of another primary election day looms over the political horizon, pre-election wagers show Gordon S. Breen, Democratic candidate for sheriff of Will County, on the long end of the odds over all opponents.

After a clean and vigorous campaign, Gordon S. Breen is the popular choice on the Democratic ticket, mainly on the strength of his experience as Chief Deputy under his father, Sheriff Michael J. Breen.

Why Lottie O'Neill And Warren Wood Should Be Supported

I read in the Chicago paper last Sunday of the campaign which Mr. Wm. McCabe is making against the best representative we have ever had in our State Legislature, Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill. As a staunch supporter of clean and honest politics, and therefore of Mrs. O'Neill, would like to say in her behalf, it is inconceivable that Mr. McCabe would get one single vote in Mokena or Frankfort township next Tuesday, when we remember how Mr. McCabe worked against the interests of Mokena when he worked against Wolf road and supported Mr. Cleveland in his fight against Wolf Road and which caused an unnecessary expense to our county. We surely enjoy driving on our paved road now, so let us not forget to vote for Mrs. O'Neill and Warren Wood, also, and give them both a good vote. We need them both.

His friends in Mokena are wishing him success.

Frankfort Superv. Did Not Refuse Aid To Stranded Family

Sterling Highley, 39 years old, his wife Lucille, 30 years old and five children ranging from 13 to 2 years, were stranded over the week end in Joliet police station where patrolmen furnished an evening meal for them and a place to sleep in the cell block.

Highley told Capt. Ernest Overbey a complicated story of how he left Frankfort two months ago with his family when he heard his father was dying in Carthage, Mo. Before he left, Highley claimed Wm. Kampe Frankfort supervisor, had him sign an affidavit declaring that he would not return to Frankfort. Mr. Kampe also furnished part of the bus fare for the family to get to Carthage.

At Carthage, Mr. Highley said that his father showed some improvement. Two weeks later after Mr. Highley and family had been refused aid in Carthage, they started to hitch hike back to Frankfort, looking for work enroute.

Mr. Highley claimed that when he arrived in Frankfort Saturday, he found his old house in a badly dilapidated condition, with the roof burned off, the windows broken and the furniture missing. A motorist took the family to Joliet and the police station.

When interviewed, Supervisor Wm. Kampe stated that this family did not own the house in question, that they had moved their furniture months ago and that they had signed an affidavit that they were going to Missouri to work. Supervisor Kampe says he did not refuse aid to the family on their return, but could find no place for them in Frankfort.

'Any Milk Today, Lady?'

IN EVERY city, village and hamlet lives the milkman, an unsung hero of sleepy streets and the cold, gray dawn. He works at night when the world is off guard and danger most imminent. He is a magician who transforms the empty bottle on your stoop into a quart of rich, health-building milk. But he is also human.

In metropolitan centers young sophisticates are old friends of the milkman, who meets them returning from their gay rounds of pleasure. Not all encounters are so pleasant, however. He often chases burglars, calls the fire department and saves lives. Annually the Milk Industry Foundation awards Pasteur medals to milk workers for distinguished service. Example: E. R. Johnson, Chicago milkman who rescued a 10-year-old child from a sewer manhole.

The city milkman leaves home at midnight and starts delivering about 2:30 a. m. He finishes work at dawn. Note the rubber tires, a noise-abating device.

His only companion of the dawn is the policeman on his lonely beat. Each of these men has his duty to perform and often they co-operate. Many a milkman has tipped off many a policeman to some suspicious situation a few blocks back. The Law and the sleeping public have grown to depend on the milkman as a sort of nocturnal guardian whose side job is delivering dairy products.

Milk goes everywhere, by every conveyance. This man delivers on an underground route to his customers in the Lincoln tunnel between New York and Weehawken, N. J. Workers everywhere await the milkman each day.

Milk goes up in the air, too, and even chorines (right) appreciate its health-and-beauty giving qualities.

Every community in northern United States has seen the above picture's counterpart . . . the milkman making his rounds through deep snow. And every city "cliff-dweller" can appreciate the situation at the left . . . a milkman contemplating the immense job of making deliveries in a modern metropolitan apartment building. Milk goes by skis, too (right), as the resourceful delivery man employs the most convenient means of distribution. Below: Even canoes are used.

When floods raged through Ohio during the spring of 1937 many milkmen adopted canoes, rowboats and motor launches to make their deliveries, illustrating their important regard for their jobs. Right: Delivery to a gang of bridge builders.

MILK DISTRIBUTION THROUGH THE YEARS: First, from a tin can to customer's pitcher; next, to glass bottles with corks; and today, bottled and sealed, scientifically, sanitarily.

DORIS DENE'S COLUMN

Don't Believe Parents 'Narrow Minded' Until You Know Them.

DEAR DORIS DENE: I am a girl of seventeen and am kept very much at home by an over-strict mother and father. They are kind to me in some ways and will allow my friends to come to the house but they have ridiculous ideas about going out. I do not go out very often and resent it very much. Mother seems to think I am safer at home. As she has no idea of what young people are like, it seems to me that it is unfair of her to interfere. She talks about the boys I know as if they are men she'd known all her life—when really she hasn't the faintest idea what boys are all about. Mothers and fathers might be expected to keep out of what they don't understand.—I. S.

ANSWER — Sometimes it's the fault of the mothers and fathers that they seem to be such utterly fleshless and bloodless individuals. In their desire to bring up the young as they think they should they present a picture of their sterling virtue which would cause many children to regard them as less than human.

Actually though, mothers and fathers are not so short on memory as they seem. If they could be persuaded to take off the mantle of ultra respectability and virtue, and show themselves for the human beings they really are, many a son and daughter would be amazed at how much the old folks know about life and love.

Just because mother doesn't run around town with gigolos doesn't mean that she was always a settled-down humdrum sort of person. She remembers what it felt like to be in love—and she knows how near she came to making a fool of herself over the town's bad boy, and she can recapture even now the thrill of stolen joys and dangerous pleasure.

When she discusses her daughter's boy friends with assurance, she is remembering her own suitors of the past, and how much time she wasted herself in the wrong company. And she tries to steer her daughter away from the mistakes and the follies she herself committed.

Father may have turned out to be a monument of respectability but when he gives his son advice, he's speaking from real experience. He's remembering the scrapes he got into which gave him nothing but pain and humiliation. He's reliving the moments when he found that his best girl was just a weak little liar who made love to everybody—he's tasting again the bitter gall of disillusionment, and he's trying to persuade his boy to keep clear of bad entanglements.

DEAR MISS DENE: I have a dear friend, a man of forty-five, who is being very kind to me, and taking me about a good deal. My mother and father disapprove of him and I cannot get their consent to my friendship with him. They do not appreciate his intelligence or his experience. I take his advice on a great many problems because I know that he is old and wise enough to give me good advice. This makes my parents furious, although they might be glad, it seems to me, that I have such a wise friend to help me.—Jeanette.

ANSWER—How can anyone explain off-hand why Jeanette's mother and father, probably aged fifty at the outside, should be so utterly incompetent to understand and appreciate a man of nearly their own age? And why should their intelligence and experience be so useless—while the new friend is of such inestimable value?

The very fact that poor old mother and father have always been around, makes some children regard their parents as useful household equipment, rather than as real human beings.

Foolish boys and girls will submit to discipline from outsiders which they wouldn't dream of accepting from their parents. They will hang on the words of an older man or woman who flatters them—and flout the opinion of their parents who have lived and suffered and understood a good deal more than the youngsters ever dreamed of.

Mary will shrug her shoulders lightly over her mother's admonition not to run around with the Brown boy—but she will go next door to Mrs. C—a pretty widow lady, who has a talent for attracting men—and agree meekly to this lady's dictum that the Brown boy is no fit companion for any girl.

John will tell his father in so many words that he's a back-number and doesn't know what he's talking about when he advises against drinking. But when John meets the golf champion out at the club who tells him solemnly to cut out liquor there's a big reformation in the making.

As I say, it is often the fault of mothers and fathers that their children can't take them seriously as human beings. But it is just as often the fault of the children who assume blandly that parents aren't people at all.

Taking it all in all, most men and women want their children to be happy. That's what they're aiming at. And any boy or girl is safer in taking the advice of someone who is working for his or her best interests—than in trying to work out their own salvation along lines approved of by indifferent outsiders.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Unreality" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 3.

The Golden Text was, "The world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:17).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God" (Psalms 146:3-5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The true idea of man, as the reflection of the invisible God, is as incomprehensible to the limited senses as is man's infinite Principle. The visible universe and material man are the poor counterfeits of the invisible universe and spiritual man" (p. 337).

President's Action Causes Alarm

By
RALPH E. CHURCH
Illinois Representative in Congress

The President's letter to an anonymous friend disclaiming any desire to be "dictator" in the United States is one of the most extraordinary pronouncements ever made by a President of the United States. There is hardly any doubt that it was a political maneuver calculated to assist the Administration leaders in Congress in driving the Reorganization Bill through to enactment. It is designed to answer the bitter opposition to this particular bill.

Let it be assumed that the President was absolutely sincere when he set forth his reasons for not having dictatorial aims. He gave three reasons: (1) "I have no inclination to be dictator," (2) "I have none of the qualifications which would make me a successful dictator," and (3) "I have too much historical background and too much knowledge of existing dictatorships."

But that is not the point! It is not a question of the inclinations and qualifications of the occupant of the White House. It is not a question as to whether or not we trust President Roosevelt. The point is that the Reorganization Bill destroys the nice balance of powers in the American system of government. It is a system of government and not the qualifications of those who operate it which is at issue. And, if this democracy is to survive, we must preserve the system from inroads upon it, however well meaning each step may be.

All are agreed that there is a great need for reorganization of the government bureaus and agencies have sprung up like mushrooms all over the United States. There is endless red-tape and much duplication of work. Our government should be reorganized.

All are agreed that the President should have a hand in the reorganization process. His knowledge of the workings of the machinery of government is essential in any decision as to what bureaus or agencies may be rearranged or disposed of. His recommendations would be invaluable.

But why just why—can we not set ourselves to this task in accordance with the principles of this government? Why cannot we accomplish an efficient reorganization by close cooperation between the Executive and Legislative branches? Why cannot Congress retain for itself some of its constitutional power as a check on the Executive?

Let us assume that the President will not exercise arbitrary power if it is delegated to him as provided for in the Reorganization Bill. Let us assume that we trust him and that he will exercise all powers given him as wisely as any man could. Even so, is there any legitimate reason why Congress should not at least have the power, which perhaps it may never need use, to check some arbitrary or unwise action by the President?

It is understandable why there should be thousands of American citizens who are inclined to wonder about the motives of the President when he does not wish Congress to have any true check on his actions. It is difficult to understand why the president insists upon ignoring the democratic processes of government. The people are alarmed at his actions and that alarm will not be allayed by mere words of assurance embodied in a letter to an anonymous friend.

In his letter he endeavored to convey the thought that he would not veto any bill which Congress may pass rejecting some Executive Order he may issue under the terms of the Reorganization Bill. The impression sought to be conveyed by the vague language is that he would heed the wishes of Congress. If then the President believes that the wishes of Congress should be followed, why should he so strenuously object to having a provision written into the bill to the effect that none of his Executive Orders become effective until Congress approves them?

The battle which is being waged in Congress over the Reorganization Bill is over a principle of government. If there are not those who will fight for the principles of this democracy, whatever the cost, then we are certain to follow the course which has meant the downfall of other democracies in the world.

The Importance of Kernel Pattern in Hybrid Seed Corn

The farming habits of most of those that are still tilling the soil were largely developed at a time when we did not know of the existence and part played by soil bacteria in plant feeding and here again it is often difficult to teach the new tricks or get consideration from those tilling the soil when making crop or their soil tillage plans for these most essential soil microorganisms.

This bacterial activity is slowed down with low temperatures or with water logging that displaces air movement in the soil and under such unfavorable seedling growing weather the food in the kernel plays an important part. It might have particular application when corn is planted very early, when it is more likely to experience cold weather but here we also appreciate that there are certain hybrids which have high phosphorus gathering capacity through downward extending root structure and where the parent seed carries high phosphorus we have the greater ability of the seedling to stand cold. This is particularly characteristic for instance, of the Thomson Top-Yield Pfister Hybrid Seed that most of us saw growing last year in Frankfort Township along Lincoln Highway, and this characteristic is independent of kernel pattern, size or shape where it was matured on an ample phosphorous supply.

We have another phase wherein kernel plant food may be very helpful and that is if our planting is exceedingly late and we have cool weather and we are very anxious to have as fast seedling growth gain through kernel size. On the other hand, kernel size costs money. Take for instance, a large flat shape that would weigh 80 to the ounce. It would only seed two-thirds of the acreage with the same hill count where the kernel went 120 kernels to the ounce but the acre cost seed would be higher than this proportion because the price of seed of the different shapes and seed pattern is a factor of supply and demand and as most people are still selecting their hybrid seed with reference to the characters and appearances of open pollinated practice instead of the principles of hybrid performance therefore, there is a relative difference price per bushel and the combined economic difference is that the acre seed cost of the higher ounce weight count or higher bushel count of kernels would likely be only half of the seed cost per acre of the large flat size.

What we are striving to point out is that with the difference in principles governing the selection of hybrid seed corn as compared to those principles we had in mind when selecting open pollinated corn there is room for thought and consideration and in the above article we are pointing out some of the things that should be given thought and as we are readjusting to a new seed corn practice.

Buying seed corn as distinguished from our former picking from the fields means money outlay and as economic conditions of the present year are making all of us careful in our planning, we are anxious, too, that our acre seed cost can be restricted to a minimum; consequently our seed corn deserves all the thought we can give it. Many will be interested in knowing the charts have been prepared and can be inspected at the Thomson Farm showing the ranges of acre seed cost for not only different hill count practice but under various row spacing and all in turn for each of the different shapes and grades. Visitors are welcome and can with the aid of a representative, who is always there and will point out and discuss the whole range of seed application, the more readily become familiar with this new subject of hybrid acre seed cost and what we can do to our own individual cost advantage, according to our different individual soil and crop program situations.

Meet Your Corn Acreage With Hybrid Corn

Many are upset with the proposed corn acreage cut and consider their 1938 corn acreage restriction most severe. A few but not all corn growers appreciate the fact that the 1938 corn acreage cut and restriction is on the assumption that most of the corn producing acreage of the Corn Belt will be planted with hybrid seed corn in 1938 and hence, a restriction program must recognize the intention to use hybrid seed corn if the projected plan is to be effective. The average farmer is first inclined to consider production management through Government assistance against his interest but on mature consideration will appreciate it is for his own protection and advantage. The general use of hybrid corn coupled with power equipment tillage make, under favorable conditions, a crop yield that would swamp us all and result in a market price below cost of production. This would be an unfavorable position for nearly every corn grower. or illustration a corn grower would be better off with a 40 acre yield with a 75 cent market price than a 60 acre yield with a 40 cent market price. However, it is not our province here to go into consideration of the pros and cons of corn acreage control. Hybrid corn has come to stay, and we now have government control based on the assumption of its use and what are we going to do individually to meet this situation.

The only way to meet it and not be unduly penalized is for every farmer to use hybrid seed corn, if the government acreage restriction is based on the assumption of its wide spread general use. There are reasons, too, that make needful the selection of the right hybrid corn for 1938 climatic and soil conditions.

The dry sub soil that we referred to in these columns in the early winter is still with us with just that much time of its possible moisture re-saturation gone by without the needed additional rainfall. A great many farmers who have already on recent occasions dug into the soil have been amazed to note its dry, crumbly condition which is not recalled at this time of the year with in the memory of those now living. Quite a few people are inclined to judge soil moisture by the surface moisture conditions. After a day or two wet weather and a couple of more days puddling around in the surface mud they are inclined to the view that sub soil moisture reserves have been restored. Many can recall the spring rains of 1936 and 1937. They were often enough to keep a great many farmers out of the fields most of April and the early part of May. Few then realized continuance of sub soil moisture shortage but they saw all the evidences of it when the corn was wilting in July and early August. The lower depths of sub soil will be as great a competitor, or possibly greater, for moisture this year than it was last year taking it away from the growing corn if long rains do not occur between now and mid-summer, although many in the meantime, may be deceived by muddy conditions of the surface soil. If we do not have the needed moisture replenishing rains we have all the more reason to use the deepest rooted strains of hybrid corn we can get hold of for our restricted acreages. Many will recall the depth of color and the absence of firing, all thru the hot dry weather of the summer of 1937 of Thomson's Top-Yield No. 366 hybrid seed corn that was grown along Lincoln highway in Frankfort township last summer. This deep rooted character of No. 366 was later evidenced by its standing erect not only throughout the growing and maturing periods but some experimental plots, portions of which are still unhusked, have practically all their corn in an upright position on March 30, 1938.

The strength of certain hybrid root strains reflects another corn character that will be important this year, that of rapid lignification of its fiber structure, reflecting quick acquisition and assimilation of soil phosphorus. This character is most helpful in its resistance to insects either of the stalk penetration or leaf chewing types, the former as illustrated by the chinch bug and the latter by the grasshopper and various beetles.

The winter just past has been most kindly to the wintering of the chinch bug and the grasshopper eggs and we have just one more chance of weather that might yet occur and greatly reduce their numbers, that is frequent April and May showers with cold weather similar to the April-May 1937 climate, which we all still remember. If we are favored, however, with this type of cold spring this year even though we have enough water to re-saturate the sub soil, then again the type of hybrid seed corn whose seedling has the maximum of phosphorus will be needed for seedling cold resistance. It will have this property of high phosphorus if the type of plant like Hybrid No. 366 has the root gathering capacity for phosphorus and the mother seed had been grown on high phosphorus soil. Should we have this cold, disagreeable weather in May, let us not be too complaining for only with it will we be able to save our corn from high chinch bug and grasshopper damage. We will need all the yield of an undamaged crop on restricted corn acreage.

If we do not have wet cold spring weather, then we should make early preparations for poisoning the young grasshoppers, and for using the cresote barrier against the chinch bugs. If we delay too long, these materials may be difficult to get.

With the many possible turns of the climatic conditions this season we can help fortify the corn plant to some advantage with a small hill dropping of rock phosphate thru fertilizer attachment on the corn planter. Rock phosphate is the only form of phosphorus carrier that we can use without risk of yield reduction in a dry soil environment. Its saturation point in the soil solution is always below the density of plant root cell sap; hence, no danger of ever upsetting plant root system under dry soil conditions. Rock phosphate tends to work lower in the soil with gravitational water and therefore, does not, like other forms of phosphorus carriers, tend to surface rooting. It does afford the infant plant that high phosphorus environment that enables fortifying the plant in cool weather provided the plant itself is of a type or character for high phosphorus assimilation. It will aid the corn plant in increasing its resistance to the various fungi, bacterial or insect predatory attacks that it is called upon to endure and must survive to make a high yield.

If there ever was a season in which the corn grower had to use good reasoning in consideration of the many influences that may affect his yield, including corn acreage cut, it is in 1938 and the farmer of this region has a wonderful opportunity for the application of good judgment by the selection of the right kind of hybrid seed corn that will best meet for him the array of various influences that will affect his 1938 ultimate corn harvest. One thing every corn grower will be sure of: There is as much opportunity for the application of right thinking and good judgment in growing corn as there is in any other life activity.

The annual town meeting was held Tuesday afternoon, and very little interest was shown as only three taxpayers were present. Charles Doctor was chosen as moderator. The reports of the town's business were read. The only matter to be voted was the special relief tax. A few years ago a 30 cents relief tax was voted, but as the township has few relief cases at present, it was decided that a 15 cent relief levy for the coming year would be fully sufficient so this amount was voted.

ALPINE

Dear Editor:
On Sundays they come away from the city
To see what improvements have grown;
To get a breath of Alpine air,
And look on land they call their own.

This wideness in the distant view
The Dykemans say "exhilarating."
The Hunters come—Excavating;
H. Maiers, his birthday celebrating.

Five hundred chickens clothed in white,
Ben Rickerman pronounced them "goot."

But they were black when the night was passed
By the miracle of coal oil soot.

They have wired now, the Sayer's house;
What was dark before is shining bright;
Electricity is lighting Alpine,
Quite a change when seen at night.

The Bayers came out to celebrate,
To frolic on the ground and tumble;
The Bayers were friendly and entertaining,
Unlike the bears that claw and rumble.

An old timer... a Mr. Draper
Came to look after forty years,
And needed a guide to show him around;
The past was unlike what now appears.

To get the news take the Herald!

New Lenox Five Horse Men Pleased

We are pleased to advise our citizens that the slot machines in New Lenox are closed. We have apparently not been able to get our authorities to have them removed from town as they are merely locked up.

Our authorities with the exception of one, still maintain their usual indifferent attitude toward this illegal business and as was pointed out recently, if they still permit this law to be violated, it is not possible that they will allow other laws to be violated also, laws which affect us all more directly than the slot machine racket.

We as a group believe that any public authority, whether he be township, county, state or national who knowingly allows our laws to be violated, is not worthy to hold public office and should be removed from that office.

If it becomes necessary, there are several ways to enforce the laws of our state if our local officials do not see fit to do so. One of these is our Liquor Commission, which prohibits gambling of any sort in a tavern. Another, is the Dram Act, which prohibits a tavern keeper from holding public office. We have no desire to push either of these issues and will not if our authorities wake up and find that we mean business and do their duty.

The statement, that some of the owners of these gambling dens in New Lenox are making, that the slot machine racket is too big for New Lenox to fight, and that there are too many public office holders who will do nothing to have them removed, strengthens our opinion that it is all a question of graft. This makes us wonder if that is the reason they are permitted to operate in New Lenox.

We say again, throw these machines out of our township and KEEP THEM OUT!

THE FIVE HORSEMEN.

SYNOPSIS

Sarah Lynn Dana, youngest of the Dana women of Danavale, Calif., chafes at the well-ordered life approved by her mother, Adelaide, who is trying to marry her to Duncan Van Doren, Detroit society youth. Great-Granny Dana, covered-wagon pioneer, and community matriarch, recognizes in the girl the restless adventurousness of the "dark Danas," a trait shared by her and Cousin Sally Ann Dana, traveler and author, and pleads with Sally Ann to take the girl abroad.

CHAPTER II

Sally Ann Dana got through the first difficult moments of her meeting with her third cousin by making persistent talk about the nonagenarian.

"But— isn't she priceless? Ninety-six—and so quick and keen and clear! She's like—what?—a crisp, brittle little old autumn leaf blowing along."

"Exactly," he agreed. "And I'm hoping that she may just blow on and away, some day. It should be like that."

"I believe it will be. One can't conceive of helplessness and indignities for her. I'm sure she'll just suddenly—and simply—stop."

She walked to the window and stood looking out, her back to him. "Gasping for your tea?" He rang. She turned toward him and he nodded approval. "You've pasted down the calendar, haven't you, Sally Ann?" He offered her a cigarette.

She shrugged, leaning nearer for a light. "Aunt Helena says I'm skin and bones."

"Nice skin and bones. The grand-girls, as the matriarch calls them, will thirst for your gore; a lot of too, too solid flesh at Danavale. Thanks, Jens. Miss Dana will pour for me. You remember Jens, Sally Ann?"

"Of course! How are you, Jens?" The tall, stooped Swede was very well and hoped she was the same. He arranged the tray with heavy care and went creaking away.

"Oh, this is nice!" the traveler said contentedly. "Did Jens make these sandwiches? Fancy—with those sledge-hammer hands! But—why the third cup?"

"Sarah Lynn. She's very keen to meet you here, rather than at home, or at Aunt Helena's."

Sally Ann's black brows lifted. "Must I muss up my first returning raptures with the Infant Class?"

"This child is rather special. Enough like you to be, in kennel talk, your little sister."

"Ah! 'The dark one' Great-granny wants me to take abroad? Well, I won't." She took a second sandwich. "I haven't the faintest intention of weighting myself with entangling alliances. I'm utterly, comfortably selfish and intend to remain so. That's what keeps me young and spry," she told him cheerfully. "Duty-doing Danas, I observe, wax portly."

The man in the wheel-chair laughed. "Isn't it astonishing how the dark legend persists?"

"Absurd, of course."

"Exactly. Though Cousin Adelaide—Sarah Lynn's mother—rose to battle with the foolish fable. She considers it a quaint and annoying tribal superstition. If Sarah Lynn is a square peg—which she does not for a moment concede—she must and shall, notwithstanding, be snugly fitted into her round hole."

"And does she bring it off?"

He shook his head. "Sarah Lynn merely walks through her part, usually scowling. Cousin Adelaide gave her a large and heavy coming-out party, but she didn't emerge. Now I fancy the idea is to get her married as expeditiously as possible and whisked away from the local landscape."

"Married? I thought she was a child."

"Nineteen. Her mother imported a pallid youth named Duncan Van Doren a couple of years ago—son of her dearest friend in her native Detroit, who needed a milder climate, winters, and who match-makes busily but to no avail."

"Ah?" said his third cousin civilly but without enthusiasm. "Lynn, you haven't said whether you liked my 'Musical Miles'?"

"Enormously! I wrote you, but the letter evidently passed you at sea. Extraordinarily nice piece of work, Sally Ann. The Salzberg 'Festpiece' chapter was a gem! You're having topping notices, aren't you?"

"Not bad. Someone's coming." A door had banged below.

"Come up, Sarah Lynn!" the man called.

But thundering steps took the stairs in bounds and a boy of seventeen burst into the room. He was fair and freckled, with a wide mouth and singularly innocent eyes.

"Bill!" Lynn Dana greeted him, surprised. "This is Sarah Lynn's brother, Sally Ann."

"How do you do, Bill? Will you have some tea?"

"Gosh, no," he said, shocked. "No, thanks, Uncle Lynn, I can't sit down. I got to beat it before Sara Lynn gets here, and don't peep to her that I came, will you?" He turned to the woman with a vivid fusion of embarrassment and urgency. "Say, listen, would you take my sister with you when you go traveling again?"

Sally Ann smiled at him. "Afraid I couldn't do that, Bill."

"Gee, she's simply got to beat it, that's all! She can't stick around here much longer."

"But—why?"

He looked nervously out of the window. "Well—I can't make you understand, I guess, because I got to make it snappy, but she's different from most of the dumb eggs around here and my mother can't see it, and she makes her do all the things they do, and there's a dumb egg here from Detroit that my mother's always pulling for and Sarah Lynn can't see him with a spy-glass, but I'm scared stiff she'll just sort of boil over, if you know what I mean, and do something dumb!" He came to a breathless stop, his round blue eyes on her face.

Sally Ann found him singularly appealing. "Oh, I'm sure she won't, with you to look after her, Bill! Great luck for a girl to have a brother on the job."

"Yeah, but look—I'm in high school all day and in bed all night, account I'm in training, and she has to do all these dumb things, and she's absolutely cuckoo about my mother and she wants to please her and when my mother's sore at something, why Sarah Lynn just pretty near dies, so it's got me down, kind of, worrying, and—"

He looked out again. "Gee! I gotta take it on the lam! Here she comes! Well, look—you kind of think it over, will you? Uncle Lynn, you tell her!"

He plunged out of the room and they heard him leaping down the stairs.

"Rather a dear, that lad!" Sally Ann said. She set her cup down and walked to the window to see a girl and a greyhound coming up the road at a smooth and lively speed.

"She's wearing exactly the right dog for her type, isn't she?"

"Quite! It's a thing to watch—Sarah Lynn and Lightning skimming over the fields," said the man who had sat in a chair for more than 20 years.

Sally Ann walked to the fireplace and looked at a pipe-rack done in painstaking pyrography with some unconvincing red poppies painted in. Below, in unsteady letters, was the verse:

The scroll,
I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul.

His eyes followed her gravely.

"My word, Lynn! You still have it."

"Yes," he said.

Sally Ann was remembering the golden-curl, violet-eyed, mother-of-pearl maiden who had made that atrocity for Lynn Dana in the first frightful months after his accident.

"If only she hadn't died!" she reflected.

Sarah Lynn came up so silently that the traveling cousin didn't know she was in the room until she heard Lynn say—

"Hello, Sarah Lynn! Why didn't you bring Lightning up?"

"I did ask her, Uncle Lynn, but she didn't care to, this afternoon." It was an oddly deep voice for a girl.

"Sally Ann, meet yourself at nineteen!" the host said with the air of a showman.

She saw a thin young thing in a brown knitted sports frock and beret, olive-skinned, big-eyed, awkward now, in spite of the graceful swiftness she had observed from the window.

"How do you do, my dear? He flatters me! You are far nicer than I was."

"Am I?" the girl interrogated her gravely, looking at her swiftly and away again. "I don't think I can be."

"How do you take your tea, Sarah Lynn? Nice name, isn't it?"

"Lemon and cream. I mean lemon and sugar." She flushed and her cup rattled on its saucer.

"You might safely dive into the

The creature went bounding ahead of them. She made the traveler think of the figurines in white metal, futuristic and exciting, which had been a recent rage in Paris. "I don't believe I've ever met a greyhound socially before. Are they satisfactory?"

"I think so. She doesn't mind very well, but I—"

"—don't mind very much?" Sally Ann finished for her.

"No. I think it gives her more character. All the other dogs are so busy heeling and retrieving and charging and obeying." She was clearly more comfortable now, falling into rhythm with the older woman's long strides.

"I know. They strive to please. There is something rather servile about it, crawling back to lick the foot that kicks them, dying on their master's grave. Lightning, now, would hardly die on your grave unless it fitted in conveniently with her regular plans for her demise!"

Sarah Lynn gave a sudden laugh, deep and brief. "Oh, that's so absolutely true!"

"Well, here we are at Aunt Helena's. Nice to have seen you, Sarah Lynn. I'd like a walk with you and Lightning soon."

Her hostess was waiting in the hall, dressed for dinner, and there was the pleasantly muted sound of other Danas foregathered in the living-room.

"I'll be done and down in 20 minutes, Aunt Helena," the guest encouraged her.

The limp brown lace had been painstakingly pressed and her bath was drawn, but a short and stocky figure rose up before her.

"Miss Dana! If I might bother you a moment?"

"Penny! How do you do, Miss Pennington?"

Basque Dress for Girls.

No wonder girls love a basque dress like this! The fitted waist with its basque point in front gives them such a grown-up feeling. The full skirt, square neckline and puff sleeves are so becoming. TIPS to Gardeners

Combinations

TO INCREASE yield from the vegetable plot, the home gardener should grow "combined cultures."

The theory is to plant in closely spaced adjacent rows vegetables harvested at widely different times, using one before the other begins to mature.

Combine cauliflower, lettuce and radish, for instance. Plant cauliflower early in rows three feet apart. Between the rows plant lettuce, and between lettuce and cauliflower rows plant radish. Radishes are harvested early, then the lettuce, and later the cauliflower.

Following are several other combinations recommended by Harold Coulter, Ferry Seed Institute vegetable expert:

Carrots and parsnips in alternate rows two feet apart; radishes between first two rows; lettuce between second and third rows, and spinach between third and fourth rows.

Spinach rows two and one-half feet apart; radishes between spinach; pepper plants set between spinach when radishes are pulled.

The Old Man

THE reflected rays of the noonday sun flash from the panes of the great factory.

A siren sounds. The whir of machinery stops. It is the lunch hour.

From his office window the "Old Man" looks out at the smoking chimneys—across the tarred roofs of the far-flung plant whose products are shipped by rail and sea to every nation.

A boy brings a tray with a raw apple, a bottle of milk and some crackers. The "Old Man" is lunching at his desk.

As he watches the workers swarming out of the factory, he sees a crowd collecting at the gate.

Presently a man who is standing on a packing case begins to wave his arms. He is a swarthy little man with a black mustache. The "Old Man" can't hear what he is saying—but he can guess. The "Old Man's" salary was published in yesterday's newspaper. His income runs into six figures—more than the salary of the President of the United States.

The man speaking from the packing case is a professional agitator. It is his job to make the workers discontented with their lot.

"Soak the rich," he cries. He doesn't care how much the "Old Man" pays out in taxes.

"Down with capital!" he is shouting. "Down with the 'Old Man'!"

At the fringe of the crowd a young man is eating a sandwich from his dinner pail. The "Old Man" recognizes the young man. He is the son of Charlie Pedersen, a foreman in the tool room. He has been studying mechanical engineering at night school.

Young Pedersen is not paying much attention to the man on the packing case. As he munches his sandwich he is thinking excitedly—"A salary like that is something to work for! The 'Old Man' started at the bottom just like me. It's ability that counts. I have ability. Some day my pay check will be as big as that!"

The "Old Man" did start at the bottom, and he is proud of it. Five thousand men and women work for the great company and he holds the helm. Their trust, their hopes are in his hands.

The "Old Man" never went to college, yet his laboratories are filled with graduates from the best schools in the land. His alma mater was a backwoods schoolhouse where he trudged through the snow in copper-toed leather boots, McGuffey's Reader in his hand.

With most of the men and women who work for the company, "Old Man" is a term of genuine affection. They are puzzled when they hear the agitator on the packing case describe him as an octopus.

There are white-haired men on the pay roll who can remember way back when the plant was a little one-story building and the "Old Man" was a tow-headed boy who carried water for the foundry.

As the "Old Man" looks out the window he is not worried about the man on the packing case or what he is saying. He has met his kind many times before.

He is worried more about what is happening in America today and about the eager, bright-eyed son of Charlie Pedersen.

He is worried lest the sickness that has seized upon the rest of the world spread its infection through America; worried lest all the isms and insidious doctrines of alien places destroy our greatest heritage.

Land of the free, and home of the brave!

He thinks of Washington and Patrick Henry, of Jefferson and Lincoln.

He thinks of the thousands of brave Americans who have faced the wilderness, who have laid down young lives on Freedom's altar.

He thinks of his own father walking beside his creaking wagon, crossing the Alleghenies, with a rifle in his hand.

He thinks of his birthplace, an humble cabin on an Ohio farm chopped out of the hardwood.

He reviews his own life, from its lowly beginning to his present proud position in industrial America.

"Isn't the essential difference," he asks, "between this America of ours and all the polyglot nations of the earth, that this has always been a free land where men of ambition may scale the dizzy heights?" The social register of American business is filled with the names of men who came into the world with empty hands.

Is the man on the packing case right? What does he offer in exchange?

There must be bosses under any system. Isn't the better boss a man who has worked his way from the bottom to the top, a man who is a good boss because he understands the problem?

It would be too bad, the "Old Man" thinks, if the son of Charlie Pedersen should miss the opportunity that is his by heritage. It would be too bad if America should become like other countries, so regimented and politician-ruled that it would no longer be possible for a man to toil and climb and pluck the prime fruits of reward.

For then this country would cease to be—America, sweet land of Liberty.

Lesson for April 10

FINDING OURSELVES
IN SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:27-33.
GOLDEN TEXT—"What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"—Mark 8:36.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What Peter Found Out.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making Life Count Through Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Finding the Richest Life Through Service.

"Finding ourselves" seems like a singular, almost self-contradictory expression, but it refers to a sound principle recognized by psychologists as well as spiritual leaders. As a matter of fact, modern psychology has begun to recognize and use spiritual laws and principles which alone bring about human happiness and efficiency.

A word of warning—let no one who studies this lesson fall into the serious error of thinking that some formal religious service will bring redemption and favor with God. We are saved by grace through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ—"not of works, lest any man should boast." It is then by the new birth that we are "created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Eph. 2:8-10).

It is the Christian who needs to "find himself in service." Only as he thus yields to Christ does he really find the life worth living. The words of Jesus in verse 35 are solemnly and gloriously true.

I. Clear Confession (vv. 27-30).

Even those who deny to our Christ the recognition of His deity, and the devotion of life which is His just due, must, if they are at all intelligent, admit that no man ever lived who has made such an impact on human history. Even in the days of his life on earth those who did not accept Him as Christ regarded Him as the resurrected form of one of the nation's greatest leaders. Now unbelieving men speak of Him as the great founder of Christianity, a mighty leader, a wonderful example, or an unequalled teacher.

It is not enough that we stand with the mass of humanity who may thus admire Him, but who do not count Him as Saviour and Lord. The question comes to us as it did to the disciples, "Whom say ye that I am?" "Thou art the Christ"—this alone suffices as the foundation for Christian testimony and conduct.

II. Corrected Error (vv. 31-33).
Although Jesus was not yet ready to have His Messiahship proclaimed to the public, He was prepared to teach His disciples concerning not only that important truth, but of His rejection and death. "He began to teach them that the Son of man must suffer . . . be rejected . . . killed and . . . rise again."

Note the divine "must." While it is true that wicked men showed their hostility toward our God and His Christ by hanging Him on Calvary's cross, yet it was to die for our sins that He came into the world. The cross has rightly come to represent God's love to the world rather than man's hostility to God.

Error now asserts itself, and strangely enough it is the very one who had the clearest grasp of the truth regarding the Messiahship of Christ and boldly expressed it who now objects to the revelation of the coming death and resurrection of Christ, and lends his voice to rebuke the Master for speaking of it.

Satan hates the cross and the open grave. Jesus won the victory over him there. He did not want to hear of it before it took place and used impulsive Peter for a mouthpiece to object. He doesn't want to hear about it now and uses many a skillful and gifted preacher to speak against it. "The offense of the cross" (Gal. 5:11) has never ceased.

III. Consecrated Life and Service (vv. 34-38).

"Let him deny himself" (v. 34). That command we have construed to mean that we should perform little acts of self-denial, foregoing some comfort or pleasure, possibly for a few weeks. It does not mean that at all—but does mean the renouncing of self and self-will, and a complete yielding to God's will. Likewise, to take up one's cross does not mean to bear some of life's little disagreeable experiences; it means again to die to self and to live for Christ.

Careful attention should be given to the solemn questions asked and statements made in verses 35-37. These are not the reasonings of a man—they fall from the lips of the Son of God. What, He asks, will you give in exchange for your soul?

Payment

How little we pay our way in life! Although we have our purses continually in our hand, the better part of service goes still unrewarded.

Discussion

The more discussion the better, if passion and personalities be eschewed.

Pain

Pain is in itself a sharp discipline and hard to bear.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Relates the Miracle of VITAMINS and Explains Why YOU MUST EAT THEM or DIE

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

WE LIVE in the most inspiring age the world has ever known. Chemists grow plants without soil. Doctors snatch men from death with insulin. Surgeons perform incredibly delicate brain operations. And thanks to the amazing discoveries of nutritional scientists, children enter the world with far better chances for long and happy lives, while men and women of seventy are more active and useful than their grandparents were at fifty.

Much of the hard-won knowledge of how to eat so as to increase efficiency, curb disease, and improve the chances for longevity is due to the discovery of vitamins.

VITAMINS DISCOVERED

Twenty-six years ago, a now-famous scientist walked nervously around his laboratory, back and forth—back and forth. He was conducting a nutrition experiment of vast importance. He didn't quite know what he was going to find, but he believed that he was on the verge of a revolutionary food discovery.

The scientist was my friend, Casimir Funk, a brilliant Polish bio-chemist. He had been working on the problem for many years. At last, in the year 1912, his experiments were positive and conclusive. Then he announced to the scientific world that he had discovered a vital force. "This force," said Funk, "I have called vitamine, because it is necessary to life."

Thus, the word "vitamin" came into being, along with the first knowledge of these minute but powerful factors which exert such a tremendous influence on human health and happiness.

SPARK PLUGS OF NUTRITION

Other bio-chemists throughout the world—including Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins in England, and Hart, Humphrey, Babcock, Steenbock and McCollum in the United States—had been working on the same problem that Funk had partially solved. They knew that the first step was to find out how vitamins affected the human body, and that the second step was to discover what foods contained these vital substances.

And so there began a long series of experiments in the laboratories of great universities all over the world, which demonstrated what happens when a diet is deficient in any of the vitamins, and proved that if laboratory animals are wholly deprived of vitamins for a short time they will die.

These experiments are of the utmost significance to every homemaker, because the same thing happens to human beings as to experimental animals. Today our knowledge of vitamins has progressed to such a degree that it is possible to state the exact requirement for most of the vitamins and to designate the foods from which adequate quantities can be obtained.

RESISTANCE AND VITAMIN A

To date, six vitamins have been identified. Vitamin A promotes growth and builds resistance to

Building, Maintaining Family Health

IN THE C. Houston Goudiss articles that have appeared weekly in this newspaper previous to this one, the nationally known food authority has described FOOD, as it provides the key to mental and physical power; PROTEINS, the foods you cannot live without; CARBOHYDRATES and FATS, foods that provide motive power for the body machinery; and MINERAL SALTS, that you must have in order to build strong bones, healthy nerves and rich, red blood.

These subjects have been treated in an interesting and understandable manner, free of scientific terms, principally offering advice to the housewife that will aid her in the problem of feeding the members of her family such foods as will build and maintain their health.

Every one of these articles has a definite place in your scrapbook for future reference. If you have missed any of these discussions, the publisher of this newspaper will supply them upon your request. If you have not already done so, start a department of these informative articles in your scrapbook at once!

disease. It is necessary for the health of the mucous membranes of the body and helps to guard against infections of the respiratory and alimentary tracts. It influences the health of the hair and skin, is necessary to prevent a serious eye disorder known as night blindness, and is essential for the formation of healthy teeth.

Vitamin A is found in milk, butter, margarine that has been reinforced with vitamin A concentrate, egg yolk, cod-liver oil, thin green leaves and yellow fruits and vegetables such as carrots, sweet potatoes, apricots and bananas.

APPETITE AND VITAMIN B

Vitamin B promotes appetite, aids digestion, prevents a serious nerve disorder. It is essential to the maintenance of a good digestion, which is vitally important if the body is to obtain full benefit from the food consumed. This vitamin is closely related to the energy metabolism, and the requirement increases with the rate of growth and with increased energy expenditure, so that growing children and working men and women should receive very generous amounts.

Vitamin B is found in yeast, whole wheat cereals, oatmeal, milk, fresh and dried peas and beans, spinach, cabbage and other greens, egg yolk and liver.

VITAMIN C FOR TEETH, GUMS

Vitamin C plays an important part in regulating body processes, and prevents the dread disease of scurvy. A lack of this essential vitamin results in profound changes in the structure of the teeth and gums, may be responsible for hemorrhages occurring anywhere in the body, and for the degeneration of muscle fibers generally.

Vitamin C is most abundant in succulent fresh green leaves, such as green cabbage. It is also found in onions, potatoes, oranges, tomatoes, green peppers, bananas and strawberries.

VITAMIN D AND RICKETS

Vitamin D is sometimes called the sunshine vitamin because it can be manufactured in the body through the action of direct sunlight on the skin. This is the vitamin that is necessary for the proper utilization of calcium and phosphorus in building bones and teeth. When it is lacking in the diet of infants, there develops that horrible disease known as rickets, in which the bones become soft and twisted, resulting in pitiful deformities—knock knees, bow legs, pigeon breast.

In foods, vitamin D is only found in appreciable amounts in fish-liver oils and egg yolk. That is why every homemaker should be so grateful to the scientists who labored to discover how to concentrate this precious vitamin from fish-liver oils and add it to foods, or to increase the vitamin D content of foods through irradiation.

ANTI-STERILITY VITAMIN E

Vitamin E comes in for less discussion than the others, because its significance to nutrition has not been fully determined. It does, however, appear to be necessary for successful reproduction and is found especially in wheat germ and lettuce.

VITAMIN G PROLONGS YOUTH

Vitamin G is necessary for growth and for the maintenance of health and vigor at all ages. It helps to ward off old age by prolonging the vigorous middle years. It is essential to the health of the skin, and recent experiments demonstrate that cataracts in the eyes may be due to a deficiency of this vitamin, which is found in yeast, and in liver, kidneys, egg yolk, milk, cheese and green leafy vegetables.

Certainly enough has been learned of vitamin chemistry to make clear that the homemaker fails in her duty who does not provide vitamins in abundance for every member of her family. Both children and adults depend upon you for their food supply. It lies within your power to help them to health and happiness or condemn them to weakness, illness and sorrow. Do not fail them. See to it that every member of your household—your children, the wage earners, the middle aged and the elderly—get enough vitamins to afford them the health that science has placed within their grasp.

What Is the Cause of

"Spider-Web Check"?

If not properly "fed" with a good oil polish, furniture in time develops what is known as "spider-web check." This appears on the finish, like wrinkles on the human face—fine lines, spreading here and there in a spider-web pattern. This crazing, this light cracking, is known in furniture language as "checking" and "spider-web checking" better describes the condition. This is the danger-signal, on finish! It's the indication of "starving" wood! A warning to the housewife, that if the finish is not cared for immediately and properly, the furniture will develop cracks, ridges and splits. "Spider-web check" is generally the result of either one of these two causes: Polish-neglect—or the use of a poor, cheap polish—without the essential fine, light-oil base. When the furniture is periodically "massaged" with a reputable oil polish (the best is non-greasy), the pores of the wood are "fed" and the piece is preserved. Then "spider-web check" will not appear! The use of a quality oil polish is the best preventive formula for this ugly, detrimental check!

MORE WOMEN USE O-CEDAR POLISH THAN ANY OTHER KIND!

... because O-Cedar not only cleans as it polishes, but preserves your furniture—"feeds" the finish, prevents drying-out, cracking. Insist upon O-Cedar Polish, for furniture, woodwork and floors (with the famous O-Cedar Mop).

Gordon S. Breen In Sheriff Race On Service Record

precinct committeemen throughout the 24 townships in Will County, have selected Gordon Breen as the party candidate. As the race is in the final stretch, Gordon Breen appears to be holding a comfortable margin and his supporters are confident of victory.

The record of Gordon Breen as chief deputy stands for itself. His achievements have been enumerated through the newspaper and radio channels.

The Democratic organization are confident it can ride to victory next November by nominating Gordon Breen in the primaries April 12th. His achievements the past three and one-half years as chief deputy are self explanatory.

The establishment of the long-needed Bureau of Identification indicated the Breen administration possessed constructive ideas concerning the modernization of the county police department. This comparatively new department consists of finger printing and photographing all criminals apprehended, copies of which are sent to other police departments including the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The sheriff's office has at all times been known by other police bodies throughout the state of Illinois for its outstanding cooperation. This spirit of co-operation has extended to the city, state and federal police departments. It has always been Chief Deputy Gordon Breen's contention that coordination between policing bodies is definitely necessary for the swift apprehension of criminals.

There has been a general curtailment of crime in the sheriff's office through intensive and thorough investigations. It has been estimated that about ninety percent of all crimes committed in Will County the past three and one-half years have been solved.

Farmers throughout the county formed the F-Men group to combat cattle rustling and farm thievery. Chief Deputy Gordon S. Breen deputized men in all the townships throughout the county and at the present time the estimated membership of the F-Men group is approximately 1,000. The formation of this group has practically eliminated crime in the rural districts. From the first day the Breen administration took over the sheriff's office they have pledged protection to the citizens of Joliet and Will County.

The sheriff's office has always been prompt and alert in responding to calls.

Alertness was responsible for the capture of John Jelliga and Michael Munjas, slayers of Edward Pansa near Crete last December.

During the Breen administration, audits of the books reveal a surplus amount of cash was turned over to the County treasurer's office at the end of each fiscal year.

For an efficient and economical administration for the next four years, the nomination of Gordon S. Breen is urged.

Early Iron Plows Rejected

The first successful cast-iron plow invented in the United States in 1797 was rejected by New Jersey farmers under the theory that cast iron poisoned the land and stimulated the growth of weeds.

 "Better Be Safe Than Sorry"

APRIL FOOL IS PASSED, BUT—

Since the advent of the New Deal every thing that was old, is out of order and therefore the old saying, "April Fool is past, etc. etc.," is not true any more. So it is proper to carry April Fool Day as long as we care to. So it comes in handy this time, when because of lack of space last week we could not complete the resume of Mokena's activities.

Anyway we couldn't tell of our Mayor, Harry Mall's new idea, as he was in Wash., D. C., conferring with President Roosevelt about securing funds for the erection of a Snow Ball factory in Mokena and it seems that he received support far beyond his fondest dreams. It works right in with his now famous, Trained Biteless Mosquito Show.

And since the Mokena Oil Co., has added a museum park, on the order of "The House of David" to their place of business, they are so busy that Mr. Frank Hirsch has offered to be over-seer and Morry Larson is assisting as engineer on the miniature trains. Things went along fine with the train until Morry caught a monkey smiling and throwing kisses to him that he forgot about his engine and had it not been for the timely intervention of Mr. Hirsch, the whole train would have run off the track into Lake Mokena, where at the time were Fred Rauch and Chas. Burkhardt feeding ice cream to the parrots.

We surely are more than pleased to note the great success Mr. and Mrs. August Pfleger are having with their photo studio. Many exceptional pictures of Mokena people are seen on their studio walls. They advertise free pictures taken of any who attend their salon exhibitions on Mondays.

RELIGIOUS SUPER SPECIAL "GOLGOTHA"

Golgotha—9 reels. This is absolutely the only All Talking Life of Christ ever brought to the screen. It must not be confused with the various Passion Plays, which in the main are old silent films with musical accompaniment dubbed on for sound. But in "Golgotha" the characters actually talk. The role of Christ is played by the famous French actor, Robert le Vigan, and all the other characters are especially chosen because of their adaptability to the role they portray. DON'T MISS LAST CHAPTER No. 12 OF "DEVIL HORSE."
